Sir:

If anyone still entertained the least bit of doubt of the bias which existed in the Senate Watergate Committee hearings, Friday afternoon's session presented ample evidence to dispel that question.

The tirade by the chairman of the committee against the President of the United States supported by the flimsiest evidence imaginable casts an imputation upon a group which in the past has been referred to as the "greatest dilliberative body in the world."

I am sure the vice-chairman was humiliated by this and tried in a restricted way to smooth over the coarse and vulgar outbreak by an unreasonable chairman. This outburst culminated several days of testimony by a witness who put matters in a sensible perspective as opposed to that of the only witness who tried to involve the President. It is to be noted that the testimony of this witness has been refuted time and again by subsequent witnesses. The chairman by all indications is out to get the President and the incident referred to was a last desperate attempt to do this.

For the chairman to refuse the witness or his distinguished attorney to make an appropiate reply so as to set the record straight with the American people set a new low in the conduct of the hearings.

The Pastor Speaks

The Greatest Thing In The world

Love is the greatest thing in the world - the greatest privilege and power known to man. The love of God in His people changed the course of history as the first century Christians demonstrated a quality of life never before witnessed on this earth. The Greeks, Romans and Jews hated each other. The very idea of love and self-sacrifice was foreign to their thinking. When they observed that Christians from many nations, with different languages and cultures, actually loved one another and sacrificed to help each other, they responded in amazement, "Behold how these people love one another!"

Each week this month, I will share with you one main though about God's love. This week I say to you that GOD LOVES US UNCONDITIONALLY. His love is called "Agape" in the Greek language of the New Testament. God's supernatural love for us revealed through our Lord's death on the cross for our sins is the same love He wants to produce in us, and through us to others, by His Holy Spirit.

Think of His love based on His character which is Holy. He loved us "in spite of" rather than "because of." We were sinners, yet He loved us, and if you are still in your sins He loves you now. No matter what you have said, done, or thought; He loves you perfectly and completely right now. Every person on earth needs three basic human requirements: acceptance, approval, appreciation, and God offers you all three unconditionally in Christ.

The Sunday School Lesson

HERBERT C. BRADSHAW
P. O. Box 1833
Durham, N.C., 27702

Comment on the International Sunday School lesson for Sunday, August 5, 1973.

Topic: The Peril of Greed

Scripture: Exodus 20:17; Ecclesiastes 5:10- 6:2; Matthew 20:20-28; Luke 12: 13-21; 1 Tim. 6:6-10.

The 10th Commandment, which is the theme of this week's International Sunday School lesson, deals with the motivation which leads people to violate other commandments concerning human relationships. Covetousness is at the root of some murders ("You desire and do not have, so you kill," wrote James), of adultery (in the lust for a person of the opposite sex to whom one has not been united in marriage), of stealing (taking something which belongs to another). It may be motivation for lying and bearing false witness, and it is one cause of disrespect for parents (see Mark 7:9-13).

Covetousness stems from mistaken priorities in and a distorted perspective of life. In answer to a man who asked Jesus to instruct his brother to divide an inheritance with him, Jesus put the matter of materialism in true perspective: "a man's life does not consist in the abundance of his possessions." In effect, Jesus told the man who sought his assistance that in the right scheme of life the inheritance was an inconsequential matter. Then He told a parable to illustrate how transient material possessions are. Each individual must leave them behind when he takes the inevitable journey by which he passes from this life to the next.

A lesson on covetousness is particularly relevant in a society in which materialism is a prevailing philosophy of life, as is the case in the United States today. (Covetousness, however, is not limited to material things.) With its emphasis on the accumulation of wealth, of things, of influence, of power, materialism stimulates people to accept a false standard of values and to adopt mistaken priorities. In doing so, material things.) With its emphasis on the accumulation of wealth, of things, of influence, of power, materialism stimulates people to accept a false standard of values and to adopt mistaken priorities. In doing so, materialism encourages covetousness, for one of its erroneous standards may be stated in the phrase, "keeping up with the Joneses."

The antidote to covetousness - in a quite real sense covetousness is a poison - is a reordering of priorities and giving first place to what is truly of first importance. Jesus gave us a proper order when He said, "But seek first his (God's) kingdom and his (God's) righteousness, and all these things shall be yours as well." Man's relationship to God is the most important matter in life, and to this he should give the priority. When he does this, other matters fall into place and perspective.

Paul wrote that "there is great gain in godliness with contentment," adding that as to material things, "if we have food and clothing, with these we shall be content." Several years ago, when attending worship in one of the great churches of New York City, this writer noticed a couple plainly dressed in clothes conspicuously out of style; he subsequently learned that this husband and wife each year gave at least 25 per cent of their income to promote the cause of world peace. At the expense of personal appearance, they contributed generously to a cause they believed would benefit mankind, thus showing their priorities.

An old English family has as the motto on its coat-of-arms, Qui vit content tient assez - he who lives content has enough. Contentment is the golden mean between covetousness and materialism on one extreme and total indifference and indolence on the other. Godliness with contentment is a way of life the believer should strive earnestly to cultivate, for this combination is a satisfying replacement of the covetousness and evil which are destructive of spirituality and whose fruit is emptiness of life.

The Energy Crunch:

Energy Insurance begins at home.

Insulate your home.

This summer, Vepco expects to meet all your demands for electricity and still maintain a reserve. And to protect your future supply of electricity against shortages of fuels like coal and oil, we'll be producing half of our electricity from clean, safe nuclear power by 1976. Not only does nuclear power help avoid energy shortages, but it is also the lowest cost new method of producing power that is available to us today. But, even with these safeguards, we should remember that electricity is one of today's greatest resources—and a resource to be used wisely.

Whenever you buy an appliance—refrigerator, air conditioner, TV, washing machine—make sure you are getting one that will operate efficiently and economically. Take air conditioning, for example. Go to a reputable dealer and let him calculate your requirements. And once you know what size unit you need, compare efficiencies before you buy. All you have to do is look at the rating on the nameplate. Some air conditioning units use considerably less electricity for the same amount of cooling.

Install storm windows and doors.

Of course, how you use your unit makes a difference, too. Poor insulation means that cooling power goes out through the walls and ceilings. And not closing the blinds or shades on the sunny side of your home just adds more heat that has to be removed.

Don't overload your air conditioner by adding extra heat during the hottest part of the day. Doing your baking and ironing and laundry during the hot hours of the day helps create peak power demands that can only be met with additional construction and higher costs. Plan these jobs for the morning or late evening hours on those hot muggy days.

But whether it's more efficient cooling, or waiting to wash a full load, or just remembering to turn off the TV, whatever you can do to increase the wise use of electricity adds up to money savings for you and energy conservation for everyone.

And that's what Energy Insurance is really all about.

Check the efficiency of appliances before you buy.

FAMILY REUNION

The annual reunion of the descendants of Stephen Thomas and Elvira Gordon Marsh will be held at the Woodmen of the World Building, Appomattox, Sunday, August 5. A short business session will be held at 1 p.m., followed by a basket dinner. Friends of the family are cordially invited to attend.

The Marsh family reunion has been held annually since the 1920's. Both Mr. and Mrs. Marsh died in 1933. There are now nearly 400 living descendants, including a number of great-great-great grandchildren. About 200 usually attend the family reunions, including spouses and guests.
